Preface

CUI Lahore Library serves as a vital hub of knowledge and information, supporting the academic, research, teaching, and learning needs of faculty, students, researchers, and staff. To fulfill these needs, the Library continuously develops and enriches its collection of information resources, including books, journals and magazines, theses and dissertations, company reports, newspapers, and audio-visual materials. These resources provide essential support for research, reference, teaching, learning, and academic development across the CUI community.

The effective achievement of the library's mission depends significantly on systematic, balanced, and need-based collection development. A well-planned collection, with adequate representation across all academic disciplines and subject areas, enables library users to access relevant and reliable information resources and derive maximum academic and research benefit from the library's holdings.

This report presents an overview of the progress and development of the Library's collection over the previous years. It provides a comparative view of collection growth across different periods and academic disciplines. The report will assist university authorities, academicians, researchers, and library users in understanding the development and current status of the Library's information resources. It will also provide a useful basis for library professionals in reviewing and strengthening future collection development and acquisition policies.

I would like to express my sincere appreciation to Dr. Muhammad Asif, Convener, Library Affairs Committee, for his continuous encouragement, guidance, and support. I also acknowledge the dedicated efforts of Dr. Muhammad Ishtiaq, Deputy Librarian, whose commitment and enthusiasm contributed significantly to the preparation of this report.

Best regards,

Dr. Muhammad Tariq
